

IS THE CURE WORSE THAN THE DISEASE?

REFLECTIONS ON COVID GOVERNANCE IN SRI LANKA

EDITED BY PRADEEP PEIRIS

Contributors

Bhavani Fonseka is a Senior Researcher and Attorney at Law with the Centre for Policy Alternatives, with a focus on research, national and international advocacy and public interest litigation. She is presently on the editorial board of the International Journal on Transitional Justice and a visiting lecturer at University of Colombo. She was an adviser to the Consultation Taskforce appointed by the Government of Sri Lanka in 2016 and a member of the drafting committee to formulate the National Human Rights Action Plan for Sri Lanka for the period 2017-2021.

Kaushini Dammalage is with the Social Scientists' Association. Her primary research interests are in gender studies, democracy, electoral politics, and the history of leftist politics in Sri Lanka. She has conducted research on the gendered processes of labour mobilisation in the plantations, and the party organisational strategies of the traditional left in Sri Lanka.

Hasini Lecamwasam is lecturer in Political Science at the Department of Political Science, University of Peradeniya, and co-editor of Polity, the English language magazine of the Social Scientists' Association. Her research interests include the Political Sociology of identity construction, democratising of education, and spatial politics.

Nipunika O. Lecamwasam is lecturer in Political Science attached to the Political Science and Sociology programme at the Royal Thimphu College, Bhutan. Her research interests span anthropology of development, youth, peace, and democracy research.

Sakina Moinudeen is a Researcher at Social Indicator, the survey research arm of the Centre for Policy Alternatives, and has extensive experience in both quantitative and qualitative methods of research. Her research experience has led her to deal with public perceptions and expectations of democracy and governance, literacy and nutritional aspects of development, and issues of war and peace with particular relevance to post-war and conflict societies.

Pradeep Peiris is senior lecturer at the Department of Political Science and Public Policy, University of Colombo, and founder of Social Indicator, the survey arm of the Centre for Policy Alternatives. He has published on a range of subjects from the federal debate in Sri Lanka to the state of democracy in Sri Lanka. His research interests include conflict resolution, gender, political parties, local government, and the state of democracy in South Asia.

Kushmila Ranasinghe is a Researcher at the Centre for Policy Alternatives. She graduated from the Faculty of Law, University of Colombo with an LLB and also holds a BSc. (Hons) in International Relations from the University of London.

Shashik Silva counts more than 15 years of experience as a survey researcher, quantitative analyst, and qualitative researcher. He has previously worked with Social Indicator, the survey research arm of Centre for Policy Alternatives, and the Applied Research Unit of UNOPS. He is presently Researcher and Administrative Manager at the Social Scientists' Association of Sri Lanka. His main research interests are in deciphering the multiple narratives of reconciliation in Sri Lanka, understanding citizens' aspirations for justice, and issues of inclusion and exclusion in local governance. He is a member of the World Association for Public Opinion Research (WAPOR), and has presented his research at annual conferences organised by WAPOR Asia since 2019.